Section 11: Free Speech Rights of Senators

- A. The members of the Senate shall enjoy the following rights and privileges as members of the Senate:
1. All Senators have the right to free speech, which shall not be abridged by any process. For any speech or debate before, in, or after either Committee or Senate, they shall not be questioned in any other place. This precludes judicial inquiry into the content and motivation for a Senator's speech, and prevents such speech from being made the basis of a judicial complaint against any Senator.
 2. No Senator shall be considered acting in an official function outside of Student Government. For any speech or debate made outside of a committee meeting or a Senate meeting, Senators shall not be made to answer for those in any other place.
 3. No Senator shall have his right to vote on any bill abridged by any judicial process. No Senator, including those elected to senatorial leadership positions, shall have his/her statutory obligations abridged by any judicial process.
 4. Chairpersons shall not be held responsible for the actions of their committees unless the Chairpersons actually voted on the legislation in question.
- B. The legislative privileges listed above are enacted to ensure the independence of the legislature.
- C. The Speech and Debate Clause applies to the content of the speech of any Senator during his/her attendance of committee or Senate meetings, but does not preclude that the final actions of a committee or Senate may be brought to the judiciary. In such cases, the judiciary may only recommend that any questionable actions be redone by the committee or Senate, so long as the rights of those Senators are not abridged in any way by such a ruling.
- D. The rights set forth in this statute shall not be abridged by any process for any reason.
